Program Information

The Department of Art and Design, endowed as the Hite Institute of Art and Design, offers a Master of Arts (MA) in Art with concentrations in Art History and Critical & Curatorial Studies. The program requires 31 credit hours of graduate study, divided between the Core Curriculum and coursework in either the Art History or Critical & Curatorial Studies concentration.

Art History Concentration

The MA in Art with a concentration in Art History provides advanced expertise in the history of art. This course of study equips students with the coursework, language skills, and research experience necessary for further graduate study or for careers in museums or educational settings. Students in this concentration may choose from in-depth courses in topics such as Renaissance and Baroque Art in Italy, Spain, and Northern Europe; Mexican Art; 19th- and 20th-century Architecture; American Art; Film; Modern and Contemporary Western Art and Theory; and Asian and Non-Western Art and Architecture.

Critical & Curatorial Studies Concentration

The MA in Art with a concentration in Critical & Curatorial Studies integrates critical theory, contemporary art history, exhibition history, and practical exhibition experience. This concentration prepares students for careers in the rapidly expanding fields of contemporary exhibition development and art writing.

Program Resources

Students in the MA program benefit from the Hite Institute of Art and Design's extensive resources, including multiple galleries on campus and in downtown Louisville, partnerships with local museums and galleries, and an active speaker and colloquia schedule featuring internationally renowned curators, gallery directors, and artists.

Thesis

Minimum Total Hours 15

A minimum of 15 credit hours in the concentration, exclusive of Thesis Guidance, must be at the 600-level, of which at least nine (9) credit hours must be in Art History.

The concentration in Art History will conclude with a written thesis.

The thesis is a research paper that demonstrates critical knowledge of relevant sources, skill in analysis and interpretation, and the ability to present findings in a well-organized, coherent manner. The thesis must be defended in an oral examination.

Concentration in Critical & Curatorial Studies

Academic Plan Code(s): ARTMA_CCS

Upon admission to the program, students in the Critical & Curatorial Studies concentration are expected to demonstrate competence in art history, studio art, or arts management, equivalent to an undergraduate major, as well as an interest in museum theory and practice.

Written Thesis with Exhibition or Curatorial Project
Minimum Total Hours		15

A minimum of 15 credit hours in the concentration, exclusive of Thesis Guidance, must be at the 600-level

The concentration in Critical & Curatorial Studies culminates in a thesis exhibition or curatorial project. This project may be produced in collaboration with the university's galleries, the Speed Art Museum, or other appropriate institutions authorized by the department. The exhibition or project should take place in the final year of study.

To fulfill this requirement, the candidate must:

1. Submit a project proposal, approved by their graduate advisor;
2. Produce or implement the proposed thesis practicum; and
3. Document the exhibition or project.

The documentation should include materials such as press releases, announcements, wall texts, brochures, catalogs, and digital or photographic records of the exhibition or project, along with other relevant documentary materials.

In addition to the practicum and documentation, the thesis will include a written component that connects the project to critical theory and current curatorial practice. This written portion will detail the planning, implementation, and documentation of the project and must comply with the regulations governing the format and presentation of the written master's thesis.
