CONTINUING STUDIES

About the Program
Continuing Studies is a non-degree status that allows students to take up to 24 credits. Credits may be transferred to an academic program at UofL, if the student is admitted to a degree program. Continuing Studies students fully participate in all aspects of courses including assignments, discussions and exams. Students may enroll in any open course for which they meet prerequisites.

Continuing Studies students are not eligible for financial aid.

Applying for admission as a Continuing Studies student is also an option if you:

• Are at least 22 years of age with a high school diploma or GED and have not attended college
• Want to begin your college career as a part-time student and do not need financial aid
• Want to take undergraduate courses for personal/professional development
